Public turns flood debris into firewood

Fort Abraham Lincoln State Park wants to thank those that came out to the park and helped clean up tree debris by turning it into firewood. All the trees killed by the 2011 flood and cut down have now been cleared out of the campground.

“We really didn’t expect the response we got from the public to come out and cut up the trees for firewood. All the debris disappeared quickly,” park manager Dan Schelske says.
